Medical Loss Ratio
List of Health Insurers Owing Rebates in 2012

The Affordable Care Act requires health insurance issuers to submit data on the proportion of premium revenues spent on clinical services and quality improvement, also known as the Medical Loss Ratio (MLR). It also requires them to issue rebates to enrollees if this percentage does not meet minimum standards. MLR requires insurance companies to spend at least 80% or 85% of premium dollars on medical care, with the review provisions imposing tighter limits on health insurance rate increases. If they fail to meet these standards, the insurance companies will be required to provide a rebate to their customers starting in 2012.

The chart below lists, for each of the 50 States, companies that must provide rebates to consumers beginning August 1, 2012 under the Medical Loss Ratio (MLR) rule. For each insurer, it lists the total amount of the rebate owed for the individual market, small group market, and large group market in a State.ⁱ This list is based on an analysis of the annual MLR reports due June 1, 2012.

For more information about aggregate MLR rebates on a national and State level, please see HHS's report.
