This COCA Conference Call, sponsored by the CDC Public Health Law Program and the CDC Coordinating Office for Terrorism Preparedness and Emergency Response, will offer a comprehensive overview of the principal federal laws that frame responses to all-hazards public health emergencies. These laws are directly relevant to federal, state, tribal, local, and territorial agencies' emergency preparedness and response efforts.

This call will present an overview of the federal authorities for public health emergency preparedness and response under the Public Health Service (PHS) Act and related provisions of the Social Security Act and the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. The Stafford Act and quarantine authorities under the PHS Act will also be discussed. Time will be reserved for questions from participants.

Continuing Education Credits/Contact Hours will NOT be offered for this COCA Conference Call
