HealthCare.gov

Be sure to visit the newly updated HealthCare.gov website. Get up-to-date information on the Health Care Law. Enrollment starts in October, so it's not too soon to check out HealthCare.gov for new information about the Health Insurance Marketplace and how you can prepare to help people make informed health insurance decisions.

Health Insurance Marketplace

Help Us Spread the Word

Starting in 2014, there'll be a new way for people to buy health insurance. As you know, the Affordable Care Act created unprecedented opportunities for millions of Americans to access health insurance. This includes establishing the Health Insurance Marketplace, sometimes called "Exchanges."

People will be able to compare all their health insurance options in one place, and know that plans are meeting state and Federal standards. Health insurance will also be more affordable for many families, thanks to new rules that make it easier than ever to get help with costs.

Post the Widget, Spread the Word

Help us spread the word about this new program. Post this widget on Facebook or your website to help others learn how they may be able to get health care coverage.

You can find the widget and other Marketplace materials in the Resources Toolkit (see left column). Open Enrollment starts in October, so it's not too soon to get people thinking about their coverage opportunities.

Help us see how far the word is spreading. Send an email to NMTP@cms.hhs.gov and tell us your organization's name and where you posted the widget.

New options for small employers, too

Small employers will be able to use this new program to make health insurance available to their employees. They'll have the option to offer coverage from multiple insurers, choose the level of coverage they'll offer, and define how much they'll contribute towards their employees' coverage.
