Subject: Health Equity Incubation Program Webinar: Leveraging VBID to Improve Equity in Housing Stability and Quality

Please join the Value-Based Insurance Design (VBID) Model team at the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation (CMMI) in a discussion of how VBID flexibilities are being leveraged to improve equity in housing stability and quality at the next webinar event of the Health Equity Incubation Program on Thursday, December 8, 2022, from 3-4:30 PM ET!

This event, the fourth of the VBID Model's Health Equity Incubation Program (HEIP) webinars, will start with presentations from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), the Division of Energy Assistance within the Office of Community Services in the Administration for Children & Families (ACF), and the Office of Climate Change and Health Equity (OCCHE), highlighting the health and economic burdens of housing instability, the importance of utilities assistance, and impacts of climate change on housing stability and quality. Next, the VBID Model team will summarize how flexibilities in the VBID Model can be used to improve access and equity in care of enrollees facing housing instability. The webinar will also feature Medicare Advantage leaders who will discuss their programmatic strategies, successes and challenges in using VBID flexibilities to improve housing stability and quality for their enrollees. The session will conclude with an opportunity for attendees to ask questions.

All are welcome to attend, and we issue a special invitation to you, your leadership and staff in the areas of housing stability and quality, health equity, product development, and finance to join us for this exciting discussion! Details about the webinar and the registration link can be found below.
